Summary

Most hard problems are coordination problems. The vision is usually there. What's missing is the connective tissue: the systems, mechanisms, and stories that help people with different perspectives move forward together.

That's what I help teams design and implement.

I work with organizations navigating complexity at the intersection of technology, governance, and culture - from international agencies and climate-focused venture funds to startups building coordination tools and cultural organizations rethinking sustainability.

Background: International management, innovative finance, 7+ years implementing collective intelligence systems across NGOs, commercial clients, and grassroots communities.

What I do:

- Strategic systems - collaborative governance, participatory processes, organizational design
- Protocol economies - blockchain for finance/contracts, DAO models, market discovery for emerging tech
- Narrative & culture - brand marketing, product positioning, content strategy (4 languages)
- Cross-functional leadership - design-thinking workshops, investor network building, public speaking

Recent work: multi-year learning labs, 1000+ person conferences, municipal blockchain pilots, helping traditional organizations adopt new methods without breaking what works.

I fuse data-led analysis, storytelling, and digital innovation to help teams move from concept to implementation.

Please get in touch, I'd love to hear what you're working on.
